AMBER STONE

The Essence of the Middle East

AMBER STONE

(Amber Rocks)

Release exclusive and long-lasting aromas.

They will make you travel to another culture.

Amber, also known as ambergris, is a precious waxy product of the intestinal tract of sperm whales, made up of ambrein and animal strols. It is used, among other things, in the production of perfume, mixed with fragrant balms, resins and essential oils. It was originally used in the Middle East to smelt into fragrance burners that spread a delightful aroma in the homes; in the closet, the amber stones were hung in little bags among the clothes.

Since this original ambergris is no longer available, Boles d'olor started to use a fantastic natural and vegan alternative for the production of Amber Stone, thus doing full justice to the delicious aromas and texture of the traditional Amber Stone.

It has multiple uses

The shavings can be used in the vacuum cleaner bag; put the stone in a tulle bag, between the clothes or hung from the closet rod; also, in a tulle bag, you can hang it in the bathroom; and obviously, it is ideal to put it whole or a piece in a traditional burner, since when it melts and immediately will release the smell throughout the room.

The smell lasts for months

However, if it subsides at a certain time, the outer layer of the stone can be scrapped off a little, after which the smell will rise again in all its splendor.

Discover the wonderfully scented amber blocks.

Available in the following fragrances in a box of 24 un of Amber Stone.
